

Malaysian Curry Powder

Swick

Serves 1 | Active Time: 15 minutes | Total Time: 15 minutes

Toasting the Spices

To make this meat curry powder, begin by toasting the spices according to size, as they will toast at different rates.

Place a pan over medium heat and toast the cloves, cardamom and peppercorns. Toss a few times, and as soon as they begin to smoke and release their fragrance, set them aside to cool.

Do the same for the cinnamon stick and dried chilies. Next, toast the coriander seeds. Finally, toast the cumin and fennel seeds together. Let the spices cool completely.

Step 1: Toasting the Spices

- 10 whole cloves
- 10 whole black peppercorns
- 4 whole cardamom pods
- 1 cinnamon stick (about 2-inches/5 cm)
- 4 whole dried red chilies
- 4 tbsp coriander seeds
- 2 tbsp cumin seeds
- 1 tsp fennel seeds

Grinding the Spices

To grind the spices, you can either use a mortar and pestle or a spice grinder. Starting with the harder items first, pound together the cloves, peppercorns, and cardamom. Next, add the cinnamon stick and chilies and grind well. Add the cumin and fennel, finishing with the coriander seeds and turmeric.

Once you have finished pounding, you can strain the spices through a sieve to achieve an even finer powder. If there are large bits left over, you can grind these again and strain.

This blend of spices lends wonderful flavor to many curry dishes. To ensure freshness, store any leftover spices in an air-tight container.

Step 2: Grinding the Spices

- 1 tsp turmeric